

Cementex Glove Updates

Cementex gloves are Ansell gloves previously sold with the Marigold name (as shown on the red labels shown on these Class 0, 11" length size 11 Yellow gloves in the bottom row). Ansell acquired Marigold in 2012 and their rebranding for the rubber insulating glove lines is complete with the ActivArmr name (as shown on top row of gloves).

This rebranding also provides dual marking allowing this same glove to be sold globally. For all other intents and purposes it is the same glove. They are made in the the same rigorous method, meet all the same standards and test the same with additional information printed on them for different sales purposes, tracking, etc.

The distinct changes are the labels read ActivArmr Ansell as opposed to Marigold. The test stamp information is on the reverse (palm) side now and the Month/Year of Manufacture is on the top side now. The gloves feel the same just have different branding and depending upon class, length, size and color either of these styles will be supplied to you and your end users when we sell new gloves.
